CAHF WELCOMES CLEARPOL AS NEW PREFERRED PROVIDER

AI-powered platform helps long-term care providers manage compliance changes in real time

SACRAMENTO – The California Association of Health Facilities (CAHF) is pleased to welcome Clearpol to its Preferred Provider program. The San Francisco-based technology company offers artificial intelligence (AI)-driven tools designed to help long-term care (LTC) facilities stay ahead of regulatory compliance requirements and improve patient outcomes.

To address these challenges, Clearpol has developed a suite of AI-powered tools aimed at transforming compliance from a burdensome, manual process into a proactive and continuous practice. Backed by leading institutions such as UC Berkeley and supported by top healthcare systems, Clearpol's flagship platform functions as a digital co-pilot—capable of reviewing internal documents, policies, and procedures to identify potential regulatory gaps while improving clinical outcomes.

“Clearpol’s technology makes compliance smarter, faster, and more proactive,” said Arash Jafari, CEO and co-founder of Clearpol. “We’re honored to partner with CAHF and support its members with tools that are built to save time, reduce risk, and keep care standards high. Unlike traditional software, our platform is constantly learning and adapting to regulatory changes in real time.”

Among Clearpol’s key offerings is its AI Plan of Correction (POC) Writer, which can generate custom responses to CMS 2567 report findings within seconds, and designed to meet regulatory expectations on first submission. The flagship product, Clearpol Clinical, is designed to prevent deficiencies from developing in the first place while improving safety and quality of care.

“This collaboration with Clearpol reflects CAHF’s commitment to ensuring our members have access to tools that support transparency and improve resident outcomes,” said CAHF CEO/President Cassie Dunham.

The company joins seven other CAHF Preferred Product & Service Providers, offering unique resources and savings to its members while supporting CAHF activities.

CAHF’s Preferred Product & Service Providers develop a comprehensive package of programs of significant value to CAHF members.
